THE WORLD'S MOST TRUSTED REFERENCE BOOKS

The Greatest Exploration of English Ever Undertaken

Oxford—the world leader in authenticating new words and describing language—has developed the most rigorous research programme in operation anywhere in the world today.

The Oxford World Reading Programme

Tracking the growth of English worldwide lies at the heart of this, the world's greatest language research programme and the most comprehensive one in operation in the world today. On average 18,000 examples of new words, idioms, and phrases are collected every month by a 60-strong international network of readers.

The Oxford Special Subject Advisers

Once sufficient evidence for a new word has been collected, a new entry is prepared. Specialist lexicographers research the meaning and origin of the word, and consult the panel of Oxford Special Subject Advisers, a 150-strong international consultative body working in some of the world's greatest institutions, universities, and companies.

The Oxford Bank of New Words

Finalized new entries are deposited with The Oxford Bank of New Words, the database that feeds new editions of all Oxford dictionaries and which, typically, holds over 3,000 properly authenticated entries at any one time.

The British National Corpus

How are the words of our language actually used? What are the most frequently used meanings of common words? To answer such questions accurately Oxford uses The British National Corpus, an unrivalled balanced collection of 100 million words of text representing every kind of writing and speech in English. Using rapid computer search-and-analysis techniques, Oxford lexicographers can answer the most complex language queries.

OWLS The Oxford Word & Language Service

This is a unique word-help centre set up to answer special language-related questions raised by teachers, writers, specialist institutes, and

Preface

The Oxford Compact Dictionary & Thesaurus combines within one volume a concise dictionary and a useful thesaurus. These two elements have been carefully integrated so that a single entry contains information on meaning, spelling, and pronunciation, and also offers, where relevant, lists of words which are related in meaning and from which an alternative word or phrase may be selected.

Language panels and usage notes add invaluable information on grammar and punctuation, and helpful guidance on correct usage.

Also included is a special Reverse Dictionary Supplement, providing a guide to related words, a vocabulary-builder, and a puzzle-solver all in one.

Headwords

Words given their own entries are in bold type:

abandon

or in bold italic type if they are borrowed from another language and are usually printed in italics:

autobahn

Variant spellings are shown:

almanac ... (also almanack)

Variant American spellings are labelled US:

anaemia ... (US anemia)

Words that are different but are spelt the same way (homographs) are printed with raised numbers:

abode^1

abode^2

Inflections

Irregular and difficult forms are given for:

a. nouns:

ability ... (plural -ies)
sheep ... (plural same) tomato ... (plural -es)

(Irregular plurals are not given for compounds such as footman and schoolchild).

b. verbs:

abate ... (-ting)
abut ... (-tt-) [indicating abutted, abutting] ring^2 ... (past rang; past participle rung)

c. adjectives:

good ... (better, best)
narrow... (-er, -est)
able ... (-r, -st)

d. adverbs:

well ... (better, best)

Definitions

Round brackets are used for:

a. optional words, e.g. at back ... verb (cause to) go backwards

(because back can mean either 'go backwards' or 'cause to go backwards')

b. typical objects of verbs:

bank[2] ... verb deposit (money) at bank

c. typical subjects of verbs:

break ... verb (of waves) curl over and foam

d. typical nouns qualified by an adjective:

catchy ... (of tune) easily remembered

Phrases, compounds, and derivatives

a. Phrases are entered under their main word:

company... in company with

A comma in a phrase indicates alternatives:

in, to excess

means that in excess and to excess are both phrases.

b. Compounds are entered under their main word or element (usually the first):

air ... air speed ... airstrip

unless they need entries of their own:

broad

broadcast

broadside

A comma in a compound indicates alternatives:

block capitals, letters

means that block capitals and block letters are both compounds.

c. Derivatives are put at the end of the entry for the word they are derived from:

rob ... robber noun

unless they need defining:

drive ...

driver noun 1 person who drives. 2 golf club for driving from tee.

Labels

If the use of a word is restricted in any way, this is indicated by a label printed in italics.

Some labels indicate that a particular word or sense is used chiefly in the regional English specified, for example:

bill ... US banknote.

brae ... Scottish hillside.

Subject labels are sometimes included to help define the context in which a word is used:

sharp ... Music above true pitch.

Register labels indicate a particular level of usage, such as slang, archaic, or literary:

ace ... slang excellent.

raiment ... archaic clothing.

bosky ... literary wooded.

The same regional and register labels, and some subject labels, are attached to the words when they are listed as synonyms. The label precedes the synonym to which it applies:

note ... 5,6 banknote, US bill, draft.

hill ... Scottish brae, elevation ...

expert ... able, slang ace, brilliant ...

costume ... period dress, archaic raiment, robes ...

wooded ... afforested, literary bosky, forested ...

Cross-references

Cross-references are printed in small capitals:

anatto = ANNATTO

arose past of ARISE

glamour ... see BEAUTY[1]

If the cross-reference is in the defining section, it indicates that a definition will be found at the entry referred to.

If the cross-reference is in the synonym section, it indicates that a synonym list will be found at the entry (and sense) referred to.

Synonym sections

Synonym lists are matched to individual senses of a word and numbered accordingly. Sometimes one list will be applicable to more than one sense of the word and then the senses will be identified by a combination of sense numbers. If a single synonym list covers all the senses of a word then the list will not be given a sense number.

Not all senses and not all words have synonyms.

Synonyms are listed alphabetically. Sometimes a semicolon is used to divide a list according to different contexts, and these are exemplified by phrases in italic type.

Occasionally the synonyms are offered for a form other than the exact form of the headword. In these cases the altered form is given in brackets at the beginning of the synonym list. The use of bold or italic type, which mirrors that in the defining section of the entry, is governed by the type of information being offered. For example, the synonyms at sense 2 of the noun lodging are substitutable for the plural lodgings; the synonyms at sense 1 of the verb consist are substitutable for the verb + of:

> lodging noun 1 temporary accommodation. 2 (in plural) room(s) rented for lodging in.
> ■ 1 accommodation, billet, shelter, temporary home. 2 (lodgings) accommodation, apartment(s), billet, boarding house, colloquial digs, lodging house, slang pad, quarters, rooms.

> consist /kən'sɪst/ verb 1 (+ of) be composed of. 2 (+ in, of) have its essential features in.
> ■ 1 (consist of) be composed of, be made of, comprise, contain, embody, include, incorporate.

The adjective absorbing, which is defined at sense 4 of the entry for the verb absorb, is given in bold type in the defining section and at the relevant synonym list:

> absorb /əb'sɔːb/ verb 1 incorporate, assimilate. 2 take in (heat, knowledge, etc.). 3 deal with easily; reduce intensity of. 4 (often as absorbing adjective) engross attention of. 5 consume (resources).
> ■ 1, 2 assimilate, consume, digest, drink in, hold, imbibe, incorporate, ingest, colloquial mop up, soak up, suck up, take in. 3 cushion, deaden, lessen, soften. 4 captivate, engage, engross, enthral, fascinate, interest, occupy, preoccupy; (absorbing) engrossing, fascinating, gripping, interesting, spellbinding.

Hyphens

Hyphens introduced because a word is divided at the end of a line are printed sloping (-), while 'permanent' hyphens, as in accident-prone, are always printed horizontally (even at the end of a line).

Pronunciation symbols

Pronunciations are given in the International Phonetic Alphabet.

iː	s*ee*	ə	*a*go	ɪə	n*ear*

(ə) signifies the indeterminate sound as in gard*e*n, carn*a*l, and rhyth*m*.

The mark ~ indicates a nasalized sound, as in the following vowels that are not natural in English:

æ̃ (*in*génue)
ɑ̃ (él*an*)
ɔ̃ (b*on* voyage)

The main or primary stress of a word is shown by ˈ before the relevant syllable.

Note on proprietary terms

This dictionary includes some words which are, or are asserted to be, proprietary names or trade marks. Their inclusion does not imply that they have acquired for legal purposes a non-proprietary or general significance, nor is any other judgement implied concerning their legal status. In cases where the editor has some evidence that a word is used as a proprietary name or trade mark this is indicated by the label proprietary term, but no judgement concerning the legal status of such words is made or implied thereby.

Accent

1 A person's accent is the way he or she pronounces words. People from different regions and different groups in society have different accents. For instance, most people in northern England say path with a 'short' a, while most people in southern England say it with a 'long' a. In America and Canada the r in far and port is generally pronounced, while in south-eastern England, for example, it is not. Everyone speaks with an accent, although some accents may be regarded as having more prestige, such as 'Received Pronunciation' (RP) in the UK.

2 An accent on a letter is a mark added to it to alter the sound it stands for. In French, for example, there are

´ (acute), as in état
` (grave), as in mère
ˆ (circumflex), as in guêpe
¨ (diaresis), as in Noël ¸ (cedilla), as in français

and German has ¨ (umlaut), as in München.

There are no accents on native English words, but many words borrowed from other languages still have them, such as blasé and façade.

Adverb

An adverb is used:

1 with a verb, to say:

a how something happens, e.g. He walks quickly.
b where something happens, e.g. I live here.
c when something happens, e.g. They visited us yesterday.
d how often something happens, e.g. We usually have coffee.

2 to strengthen or weaken the meaning of:

a a verb, e.g. He really meant it. I almost fell asleep.
b an adjective, e.g. She is very clever. This is a slightly better result.

Comma ,

The comma marks a slight break between words, phrases, etc. In particular, it is used:

1 to separate items in a list, e.g.

red, white, and blue (or red, white and blue)
We bought some shoes, socks, gloves, and handkerchiefs.

2 to separate adjectives that describe something in the same way, e.g.

It is a hot, dry, dusty place.

but not if they describe it in different ways, e.g.

a distinguished foreign author or if one adjective adds to or alters the meaning of another, e.g.

a bright red tie.

3 to separate a name or word used to address someone, e.g.

David, I'm here.
Well, Mr Jones, we meet again.
Have you seen this, my friend?

4 to separate a phrase from the rest of the sentence, e.g.

Having had lunch, we went back to work.

especially in order to clarify the meaning, e.g.

In the valley below, the village looked very small.

5 after words that introduce direct speech, or after direct speech where there is no question mark or exclamation mark, e.g.

They answered, 'Here we are.'
'Here we are,' they answered.

6 after Dear Sir, Dear Sarah, etc., and Yours faithfully, Yours sincerely, etc. in letters.

7 to separate a word, phrase, or clause that is secondary or adds information or a comment, e.g.

I am sure, however, that it will not happen.
Fred, who is bald, complained of the cold.

but not with a relative clause (one usually beginning with who, which, or that) that restricts the meaning of the noun it follows, e.g.

Men who are bald should wear hats.

(See panel at RELATIVE CLAUSE.)

No comma is needed between a month and a year in dates, e.g.

in December 1993

or between a number and a road in addresses, e.g.

17 Devonshire Avenue.

Dash —

This is used:

1 to mark the beginning and end of an interruption in the structure of a sentence:

My son—where has he gone?—would like to meet you.

2 to show faltering speech in conversation:

Yes—well—I would—only you see—it's not easy.

3 to show other kinds of break in a sentence, often where a comma, semicolon, or colon would traditionally be used, e.g.

Come tomorrow—if you can.
The most important thing is this—don't rush the work.

A dash is not used in this way in formal writing.

Dialect

Everyone speaks a particular dialect: that is, a particular type of English distinguished by its vocabulary and its grammar. Different parts of the world and different groups of people speak different dialects: for example, Australians may say arvo while others say afternoon, and a London Cockney may say I done it while most other people say I did it. A dialect is not the same thing as an accent, which is the way a person pronounces words.

Direct speech

Direct speech is the actual words of a speaker quoted in writing.

1 In a novel etc., speech punctuation is used for direct speech:

a The words spoken are usually put in quotation marks.

b Each new piece of speech begins with a capital letter.

c Each paragraph within one person's piece of speech begins with quotation marks, but only the last paragraph ends with them.

For example:

Christopher looked into the box. 'There's nothing in here,' he said. 'It's completely empty.'

2 In a script (the written words of a play, a film, or a radio or television programme):

a The names of speakers are written in the margin in capital letters.

b Each name is followed by a colon.

c Quotation marks are not needed.

d Any instructions about the way the words are spoken or about the scenery or the actions of the speakers (stage directions) are written in the present tense in brackets or italics.

For example:

CHRISTOPHER: [Looks into box.] There's nothing in here. It's completely empty.

Hyphen -

This is used:

1 to join two or more words so as to form a compound or single expression, e.g.
mother-in-law, non-stick
This use is growing less common; often you can do without such hyphens:
treelike, dressing table

2 to join words in an attributive compound (one put before a noun, like an adjective), e.g.
a well-known man (but the man is well known)
an out-of-date list (but the list is out of date)

3 to join a prefix etc. to a proper name, e.g.
anti-Darwinian; half-Italian; non-British

4 to make a meaning clear by linking words, e.g.
twenty-odd people/twenty odd people or by separating a prefix, e.g.
re-cover/recover; re-present/represent; re-sign/resign

5 to separate two identical letters in adjacent parts of a word, e.g.
pre-exist, Ross-shire

6 to represent a common second element in the items of a list, e.g.
two-, three-, or fourfold

7 to divide a word if there is no room to complete it at the end of a line, e.g.
. . . dictionary . . .
The hyphen comes at the end of the line, not at the beginning of the next line. In general, words should be divided at the end of a syllable; dicti-onary would be quite wrong. In handwriting, typing, and word processing, it is safest (and often neatest) not to divide words at all.
